AlphaNorth Partners Fund

March 2009

Fund Review

The AlphaNorth Partners Fund increased by 4.0% in March while the TSX Venture index increased by 11.0% and the TSX Composite increased by 7.8%. Canadian small cap securities extended their outperformance year to date as they outpaced large caps by 22.1%. Many commodity prices have formed bottoms and rebounded significantly from their lows leading to an improvement in investor sentiment.

Our shift into several new energy names in recent weeks has proven to be quite timely. We expect substantial moves by several of these investments in the short term due to company specific catalysts. A couple of our favourite names in the energy space are Petrolifera Petroleum and Quetzal Energy (currently trading as TSXV: SV).

The Fund's private company holdings were a drag on performance during the month as the valuations remained unchanged during the month. However, there is some potential in the near term for liquidity events on this component of the portfolio. Two of these investments are currently doing financings which are higher than our current portfolio cost.

Market sentiment has improved over the past few weeks as equity markets have performed well. The window appears to be opening for private placements in selective small cap companies. Fortunately, it seems that fundamentals are starting to matter again.

Trading positions returned a modest positive contribution to performance for the month as 67% were closed out at a profit. The portfolio remained fully invested in March.

Outlook

As we noted in our October 2008 commentary, "the markets formed a classic panic low in October". If it were not for tax loss selling issues, Canadian small cap stocks would likely have held their October lows, but as it turned out the final low was made on December 5th for the TSX Venture index. Since that time, Canadian small caps have appreciated by more than 40% in just four months, outperforming the large cap equity indices by a wide margin. As history has demonstrated once again, it is generally unwise to sell equities at times of extreme fear and panic.

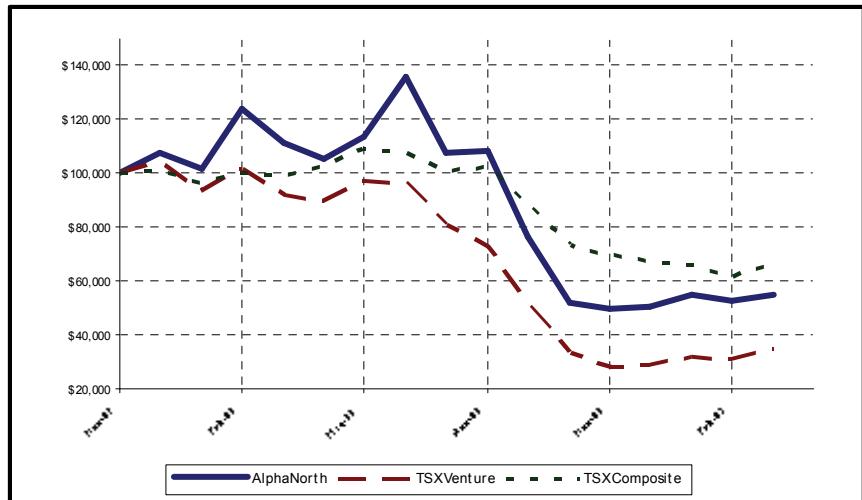

We believe that investors are generally still cautious about the recent strength that we have seen in equities. However, significant gains in small caps remain likely in the short term. The majority of investors will likewise continue to sit on cash and "miss the boat on the early gains" as noted in previous commentaries. Although 2008 was a very difficult and depressing year for small cap equities, when the pendulum swings the other way, significant gains can be quick and euphoric.

We believe markets will continue to rally in the short term.

Regards,

Steven Palmer, CFA
President and CEO

The AlphaNorth Partners Fund (the "Fund") is a long biased small cap hedge fund focusing primarily on Canadian companies. The Fund's investment objective is to achieve industry leading long term capital growth through superior selection of principally Canadian securities. AlphaNorth believes that superior long term investment returns are achievable by exploiting inefficiencies in the Canadian small cap universe through careful security selection on both a long and short basis. The firm combines both a bottom-up and top-down strategy in the selection of investments offering the best risk/reward characteristics. AlphaNorth employs various technical analysis techniques, which have proven to be successful, to assist in the timing of buy/sell decisions.
