

Fund Review

The Fund had a strong month gaining 14.0% in March. This compares very favourably to a 3.0% return for the TSX Venture index and 3.8% for the TSX Composite. The Fund's long biased investment style and the nature of small cap investments typically result in sporadic gains. The fund has quickly snapped back from the loss in January and has now returned 6.1% year to date, surpassing both benchmarks. We are pleased that the Fund has continued to extend its positive gains since inception while returns for both the TSX Venture and the TSX Composite remain negative over the period. As time passes, the performance history of 2008 shown in the proceeding graph will likely seem more like a pothole versus a cavern.

A couple of our top holdings performed very well in March. Colossus Minerals (TSX:CSI), which we have held since its IPO at $1.25 in early 2008, surged 32% in March to $6.97. Also, one of our recent additions in 2010, Cline Mining (TSX:CMK), appreciated 242% during the month. These were the largest contributors to the Fund's strong performance in March.

We have recently identified a company that we believe is extremely mispriced and over-hyped. Accordingly, we have been actively shorting this small cap technology company's shares. The shares have been strongly promoted to retail investors and they have risen 10 fold over the past 4 months, despite the company having minimal revenue and having released little in the way of positive fundamental news over the period. We are excited that this prospect has the potential for significant gains in the short term.

In recent weeks, we have committed to several new deals which we assess as having minimal downside in the short term while offering very attractive longer term prospects. A couple of these deals are already trading substantially above our entry price. Optimising the risk versus reward is one of our primary goals when selecting new investments.

Outlook

The overall strong economic data continued this month. One of the positive readings was the ISM Manufacturing index which came in well above consensus as it registered the highest reading since July of 2004. U.S. consumer sentiment also came in ahead of expectations while home prices continued to stabilize. This data has continued to improve investor confidence in the recovery and has driven equity markets higher.

Despite these positive headline indicators, one has to start contemplating a contrarian view as there is bound to be some disappointments over the summer months. We believe that it is quite likely that the equity markets will experience a 10% set-back during 2010. However, the timing of this is uncertain. We will employ our technical analysis work to assist us in identifying possible turning points in equities so that we can add negative market exposure to limit the Fund's downside if a correction were to occur. That being said, we prefer to focus on companies which are less economically sensitive and have their own company specific catalysts which should drive valuations higher.

Steven Palmer, CFA

The AlphaNorth Partners Fund (the "Fund") is a long biased small cap hedge fund focusing primarily on Canadian companies. The Fund's investment objective is to achieve industry leading long term capital growth through superior selection of principally Canadian securities. AlphaNorth believes that superior long term investment returns are achievable by exploiting inefficiencies in the Canadian small cap universe through careful security selection on both a long and short basis. The firm combines both a bottom-up and top-down strategy in the selection of investments offering the best risk/reward characteristics. AlphaNorth employs various technical analysis techniques, which have proven to be successful, to assist in the timing of buy/sell decisions.
