Class A (AAM101) $14.639
Class D (AAM201) $11.654

Fund Review The Fund returned 1.8% in February. In comparison, the TSX Venture index and TSX Total Return index returned 4.4% and 4.0% respectively during the month.

We have recently added to our Sprylogics (TSXV:SPY) position. The company has just begun the roll-out of its Breaking Sports mobile app. The technology tracks information across the various social media platforms such as Twitter in real-time and pushes relevant notifications to consumers based on their particular interests. This artificial intelligence based technology allows faster delivery of information and does not require human intervention which also makes it cheaper. Early results indicate that this app could prove to be quite popular. Initial feedback from sports enthusiasts has been very positive and the stock is beginning to perform well, rising 7% in February.

Current sector allocations are as follows: 40% technology, 23% life sciences, 9% consumer products, 9% energy, 1% precious metals and 18% metals.

Outlook In our view, early December presented an opportune time to buy into the junior market as the index hit all-time lows and preceded the usual yearend rally which has always occurred for this index. Those investors who prefer to have confirmation of a new trend should take note that the TSX Venture has held in above the December low for a period of three months. From a technical perspective, a key metric often watched by investors to identify new trends are the moving averages. The TSX Venture index recently broke above the 50 day moving average in February but has more recently fallen back below it. We expect that many investors will wait for the 50 day moving average to break above the 200 day moving average before awakening to the reality of the new bull trend. We take a more proactive approach and are positioned now to capitalize on strength in the Canadian junior market which we believe is in the process of emerging.

We have been seeing more interest in the small cap space lately, with global small caps rallying across the board in recent weeks. TSX Small Caps have performed well so far this year, despite the negative headwinds from soft energy prices and a pullback in gold from its January rally. We are starting to see decreased volatility and selling pressure in our holdings which we believe will give way for a potential rally in these names.

Regards,

Steven Palmer, CFA

Investment Strategy

The AlphaNorth Partners Fund Inc. (the "Fund") is a long-biased, small cap hedge fund which focuses primarily on Canadian companies. The Fund's investment objective is to maximize returns over the long term through superior selection of principally Canadian securities. AlphaNorth believes that superior long term investment returns are achievable by exploiting inefficiencies in the Canadian small cap universe through careful security selection on both a long and short basis. Fundamental analysis of companies is used in combination with technical analysis techniques, which has proven to be successful, to assist in the timing of buy/sell decisions. The firm combines both a bottom-up and top-down strategy in the selection of investments offering the best risk/reward characteristics.
